

About Ted Jasieniecki

The late Ted Jasieniecki grew up in Bloomfield and attended local schools, where he also participated in recreation programs, including basketball and baseball. Ted Jasieniecki's basketball career began as a starting forward on the 1964-65 team, which catapulted him to becoming the first player in Bloomfield's history to score 1,000 points. Ted's accomplishments were not restricted to the basketball court. He was also an all-star baseball pitcher, a respected leader of the 1967 graduating class, a member of the National Honor Society, graduating in the top 5% of his class. He then attended and graduated from Rutgers University. Ted's passion for the Twp. of Bloomfield was high. A dedicated man who gave back to his town, he was a coach for the Saturday morning basketball clinics, contributed to the Lions Club, and volunteered in the Youth Weekend Program. Throughout the rest of his too short life, Ted continued to excel and ultimately became a respected attorney. He left all future generations with a legacy of first becoming a fine human being—a gentleman who achieved success through hard work and dedication.

Following his untimely death, in 1987, the Ted Jasieniecki Memorial Scholarship Fund was formed and is still one of the most prestigious awards at the Bloomfield High School. For the past fourteen years, this fund has given over $130,000 in scholarship dollars to support college educations for male and female basketball players.

A winning combination of athletics and academics.

Combining athletics and academics, Team Jaz seeks to create a positive learning and recreational after school environment for Bloomfield youth.

Boys and girls in grades 4-6 will receive a combination of academic training and basketball skills building, in a fully supervised environment.

Team Jaz focuses on the three fundamentals of learning—reading, writing and math. All areas are taught by caring, certified teachers and include:

tutorials, enrichment, and test besting, a teaching approach used to help students improve their ESPA test scores.

The basketball program consists of skill building techniques. Players of all levels will increase their skills in foul shooting, dribbling, lay-ups, passing, and basic offensive and defensive plays, and gain an overall knowledge of the strategy of the game. Additionally, invited guests, such as Bloomfield's own, Kelly Tripucka, will share success stories and life lessons with the students. ■
