

Students Realize Dreams To Become Published Authors

As the pandemic closed schools in the spring, a BEF grant gave BHS students a chance to continue their writing class in a unique way. After exploring the creative process for more than six months via classroom, and then switching to group and individual online learning, each student in the class proudly published their own books of poetry and prose. Not only did BEF grant dollars provide each student with the chance to publish and receive a printed copy of their books, it also provided a copy of each new book to the BHS library.
